100th Anniversary of Start of WW I

“THE WAR TO END ALL WARS”

1914-1918

By Deborah Burkett

Looking back, we now know it was not the “war to end all wars”. Mere twenty-one years later countries across the globe would be involved in another great conflict, World War II. But at the time (1914-18) those leaving home to fight hoped their efforts would ensure ever-lasting peace.

Through the draft and voluntary enlistments a total of 198,000 Texans saw service in the armed forces during World War I. In addition, 450 Texas women served as nurses. These brave individuals found themselves in places their loved ones back home couldn’t even pronounce much less locate on a globe. Some lamented, “They might as well been fighting on the moon...that’s how far away it seemed to us...”

“Texans were interested in the events of World War I from the beginning of the conflict in Europe, August 1914. And with the sinking of the Lusitania in May 1915, a resolution was introduced into the Texas Senate asking that diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany be severed. Texans were further provoked by Germany's continuing attempts to stir up trouble on the Mexican border.

The German motive was to involve Mexico in a war with the United States so that America would be diverted from her possible support of the Allies. Toward that end Germany encouraged the internal turmoil associated with Pancho \(Francisco\) Villa, who was watched closely by the United States. Villa's raid on Columbus, New Mexico, in March 1916 brought on the punitive expedition of Gen. John J. Pershing and the call-up of the Texas National Guard...” (Ralph W. Steen, “WORLD WAR I,” Handbook of Texas)

One nurse and 5,170 Texans died during the War but as late as 1918 men were still being trained in camps throughout the state—waiting for their orders to go overseas. Such was the case for Willie D. Langston, pictured here. The war ended November 11, 1918 and Armistice was declared before Langston was shipped overseas. Hostilities stopped and the treaty took effect at eleven o'clock in the morning—the “eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month”. Later in 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower designated Nov. 11 as Veterans Day, to honor all veterans.

The accompanying page contains the names of World War I area soldiers, including Troup men who are immortalized on several monuments in local communities. The WW I statue pictured was erected in downtown Jacksonville in 1928.
